1 Scope 1

2 Normative references 1

3 Termsanddefinitions 1

4 Abbreviated terms 3

5 Identity management in the context of healthcare-related implementation issues 3
5.1 Problems for identity management in healthcare 3
5.1.1 Overview 3
5.1.2 Availability of essential medical records 3
5.1.3 Integration and acceptance of patient treatment recording in private homes 3
5.1.4 Medical facility verification of patient identity 4
5.1.5 Identity theft for access to medical treatment and related benefits 4
5.1.6 Proper vetting of medical and ancillary staff 4
5.1.7 Effective correlation of patient data needed for medical and pharmaceutical research 4
5.2 How this document can address these problems 4

6 Potential advantages of using appropriately designed biometric systems 5

7 Healthcare use cases where biometrics can potentially bring value 5
7.1 General 5
7.2 Priority group 1 6
7.2.1 Use case 5: Fast checking of patient identity in a hospital 6
7.2.2 Use case 7: eHealth: remote monitoring of patient 8
7.3 Priority group 2 11
7.3.1 Use case 1: Global logical access control of medical staff in the hospital 11
7.4 Priority Group 3 12
7.4.1 Use case 2: Teleconsultation 12
7.4.2 Use case 8: Patient authentication for public health, vaccination 14
7.4.3 Use case 9: Identification of citizens in public health to monitor a pandemic situation 15
7.5 Priority Group 4 16
7.5.1 Use case 3: Local logical access control of medical staff in the hospital 16
7.6 Priority Group 5 17
7.6.1 Use case 4: Physical access control to restricted zones in the hospital 17
7.6.2 Use case 6: Registration and control of medical practitioners 19

8 Technical design and implementation -- challenges and guidance 21
8.1 Guidance on identity management in healthcare 21
8.2 Guidance on medical record sharing 21
8.3 Guidance on secure and consistent recording for patient treatment at home 22

9 Limitations on the use of biometrics for identity management in healthcare 23

10 Coherent frameworks for identity management and use of biometrics in healthcare 23
