

ISO 17258:2015-01 (E)

Statistical methods - Six Sigma - Basic criteria underlying benchmarking for Six Sigma in organisations

Contents		Page
Foreword		v
Introduction		vi
1	Scope	1
2	Normative references	1
3	Terms and definitions	1
4	Symbols and abbreviations	1
5	General considerations on benchmarking	2
5.1	Objectives and framework	2
5.1.1	Objective	2
5.1.2	Framework	2
6	Benchmark	2
6.1	Overview and requirements for the criteria	3
6.1.1	Types and description of criteria	3
6.1.2	Requirements for criteria	3
6.2	Overview and requirements for the measures	3
6.2.1	Scope of measures	3
6.2.2	Generic measures	4
6.2.3	Industry specific measures	8
6.2.4	Summary of measures	9
7	Benchmarking	10
7.1	Objective establishment step	10
7.2	Measurement step	10
7.2.1	Data collection	10
7.2.2	Data arrangement	11
7.2.3	Data quality validation	11
7.3	Controlling the quality of the measurement results	11
7.3.1	Precision	11
7.3.2	Consistency	11
7.3.3	Up-to-date	11
7.4	Comparison step	11
7.5	Internal benchmarking	11
7.5.1	Historical benchmarking	12
7.5.2	Functional benchmarking	12
7.5.3	I/O benchmarking	12
7.6	External benchmarking	12
7.7	Supply chain benchmarking	12
7.7.1	Benchmarking in an organization	12
7.7.2	Benchmarking in a supply chain	13
7.8	Six Sigma project selection	13
8	Interface with other types of benchmarking	13
Annex A (informative)	Three dimensions of benchmarking	15

Annex B (normative) Table of criteria (generic)	16
Annex C (informative) Table of criteria with examples of results	18
Annex D (normative) Table of criteria for the food processing industry	20
Annex E (normative) Table of criteria for the automotive industry	22
Annex F (normative) Table of criteria for the retail banking industry	24
Annex G (normative) Table of criteria for clothing and leather industry	27
Annex H (normative) Table of criteria for the telecoms industry	29
Annex I (normative) Table of criteria for the hotel business	31
Annex J (normative) Table of criteria for the retail business	33
Annex K (informative) Example from the poultry industry	35
Bibliography	37