ISO 17258:2015-01 (E)

Statistical methods - Six Sigma - Basic criteria underlying benchmarking for Six Sigma in organisations

Contents

Page

Foreword v

Introduction vi

1 Scope 1

2 Normative references 1

3 Termsanddefinitions 1

4 Symbols and abbreviations 1

5 General considerations on benchmarking 2
5.1 Objectives and framework 2
5.1.1 Objective 2
5.1.2 Framework 2

6 Benchmark 2
6.1 Overview and requirements for the criteria 3
6.1.1 Types and description of criteria 3
6.1.2 Requirements for criteria 3
6.2 Overview and requirements for the measures 3
6.2.1 Scope of measures 3
6.2.2 Generic measures 4
6.2.3 Industry specific measures 8
6.2.4 Summary of measures 9

7 Benchmarking 10
7.1 Objective establishment step 10
7.2 Measurement step 10
7.2.1 Data collection 10
7.2.2 Data arrangement 11
7.2.3 Data quality validation 11
7.3 Controlling the quality of the measurement results 11
7.3.1 Precision 11
7.3.2 Consistency 11
7.3.3 Up-to-date 11
7.4 Comparison step 11
7.5 Internal benchmarking 11
7.5.1 Historical benchmarking 12
7.5.2 Functional benchmarking 12
7.5.3 I/O benchmarking 12
7.6 External benchmarking 12
7.7 Supply chain benchmarking 12
7.7.1 Benchmarking in an organization 12
7.7.2 Benchmarking in a supply chain 13
7.8 Six Sigma project selection 13

8 Interface with other types of benchmarking 13

Annex A (informative) Three dimensions of benchmarking 15

Annex B (normative) Table of criteria (generic) 16

Annex C (informative) Table of criteria with examples of results 18

Annex D (normative) Table of criteria for the food processing industry 20

Annex E (normative) Table of criteria for the automotive industry 22

Annex F (normative) Table of criteria for the retail banking industry 24

Annex G (normative) Table of criteria for clothing and leather industry 27

Annex H (normative) Table of criteria for the telecoms industry 29

Annex I (normative) Table of criteria for the hotel business 31

Annex J (normative) Table of criteria for the retail business 33

Annex K (informative) Example from the poultry industry 35

Bibliography 37